COURSE OVERVIEW

Many components of an advanced dental practice today include digital dental impressions, digital treatment planning, and definitive outcomes that use digital tools. This session aims to explore the existing and emerging tools available to you and evaluates evidence regarding accuracy and reliability of digital technology. The use of these critical advances will aid the clinician in better treatment planning, better communication, and better patient treatment. Prosthetically driven implant planning will be discussed and how to make the everyday practice even better. As technology evolves, knowledge of this topic is not only important, but essential.
